Downloading data grids

Data grids may be downloaded in common open formats, i.e. XLSX, CSV and PDF. All the data displayed will be downloaded, but keep in mind that data pages are limited to 1 000 records per page.

If your data subset is larger than 1 000 records, you have two options:

A/ Navigate thru the grid data pages and download them individually.

B/ Use the API-REST interface to download automatically the data subset regardless of its size. If you do not know what an API-REST interface is, please read the Downloading data thru an API-REST interface chapter and ask your computer wizard.

Downloading data thru an API-REST interface

The National Transparency Register for public grants and aids offers, since June 2022, an automated integration route for accessing and downloading information relating to all calls for public subsidies and grants, and since November 2023 it has been extended to all the datasets displayed on the portal.

This access and download capability is complementary to the download capabilities in open CSV, PDF and XLSX formats that have been offered since 2014, and is subject to the same conditions of use and reuse of information: <https://www.infosubvenciones.es/bdnstrans/GE/es/avisolegal> .

This integration is supplied thru a REST API-REST interface, downloading of data files in JSON format. Access to this API is public and unrestricted.

What is an API-REST?

Without going into complex IT definitions, and for the simple purposes of this document, an API-REST is a system for querying and downloading data that makes it possible to avoid manual 'screen' querying using filters, and to obtain the response results without using the website data tables.

This form of query is based on the specification of a URL locator (an internet address) containing all the parameters of the query. The chance of integrating a query with all its parameters in a URL makes it feasible to automate these queries, so that they can be performed periodically by a computer program, without the need for human action.

The result of the query via the API is returned to the user (or computer) in a JSON data format file, and easily ported to Excel or any database.

What is a JSON file?

JSON is an acronym for JavaScript Object Notation. It is a lightweight data exchange format that is easy for programmers to read and write, easy for computers to generate and understand, and independent of any language or program. In other words, it is ideal for data and information exchange.

Traceability of accesses

All operations and their response generate a trace in the systems of the National Transparency Register for public grants and aids. The following information is logged for each request:

- IP of the request.
- Date of receipt of the request.
- Operation invoked.
- URL received.
- Response sent.
- Response format. In version 2 it is of JSON type.
- Status of the request [finished-ok; finished-error].
